

Letter to Citizens' Commission on Best Practices in Government

Dear Chairman Moreno,

I note in the November 29, 2009 El Paso, Inc that the commission is off to a slow start. I would like to offer a one time $50,000 contribution so that the commission can acquire the resources it needs to move forward.

I have only one stipulation. The commission must arrange for the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality (TCEQ) to investigate the allegations that I have made against the El Paso Water Utilities Public Service Board (PSB).

I am sure that the PSB will welcome this opportunity to refute the allegations, restore their good name and silence their number one critic. On the other hand, if my allegations are true, the City can take steps to eliminate cronyism and corrupt practices at the PSB.

In either event, the commission will have $50,000 to fund its' quest for Best Practices in Government. Alternatively, I will spend the money to advertise the evidence that suggest a need for a formal investigation.

Sincerely,
Jimmy Janacek

EMAIL to Edmund Archuleta, President/CEO PSB

I attach a copy of my November 30, 2010 letter to the Citizens' Commission on Best Practices in Government. I offered the commission a $50,000 contribution to enable them to pursue their mission. But first, I wanted to be sure that they have the courage and determination to fight corruption and cronyism in El Paso. So I asked them to arrange for the TCEQ to investigate the allegations that I have made against the PSB.

This is a no lose proposal for everyone except me. I will look very foolish if I am wrong. However, you will have restored confidence in the PSB and raised $50,000 to fight corruption and cronyism elsewhere.

Please join me in this worthy cause by calling the Citizens' commission to offer your support my proposal.

Reply from Citizens Commission

Dear Mr. Janacek:

Thank you for your interest in the Citizens' Commission on Best Practices in Government. Also, thank you for the generous offer reflected in your correspondence. The Commission considered your offer and decided that we cannot accept it. While we share your interest in a fair and open government, the Commission feels it is inappropriate for us to accept funds on the condition that we focus on any one particular governmental entity. Such a condition would be inconsistent with the focus and mission of the Citizens' Commission.

Sincerely,
Enrique Moreno
